The other day, the first class was graduated from the permanent 45-day course in Marxism-Leninism, set up by the Committee for Science, Art, and Culture to raise the ideological, political, and theoretical qualifications of the teaching staffs of the country's higher educational institutions.

On this occasion a banquet was given at Bankia, which was attended by prominent public and cultural leaders, headed by the president of the Committee for Science, Art, and Culture, Professor Sava Ganovski.

Professor Ganovski gave a speech in which he outlined the objectives of the course and the help which it will give the nation's professors in acquiring more complete mastery of the teachings of Marx, Engels, Lenin, and Stalin, in raising the quality of their lectures, and in bringing science into the full service of socialistic construction in Bulgaria.

Academician Liubomir Chakalov replied in the name of the graduating class.
